Two Assistant Professor positions with tenure in Economics, Université Paris Dauphine – PSL, Paris, France

The Department of Economics of Université Paris Dauphine – PSL invites applications to fill up two permanent tenured positions at the Assistant Professor level (Maître de Conférences), starting in September 2025.

Applications are invited in all fields of Economics. Candidates whose research lies in one of the areas of specialty of the department may have an advantage. The quality of the application will notably be assessed by its ability to submit work to leading field or generalist journals.

The recruited person is expected to teach both at Bachelor's and Master's level and to carry out active research in economics.

The teaching load is of 128 hours per year, but we offer a reduced teaching load during the first three years (50% of course exemption the first year and 33% the two subsequent years). Mastering conversational French is an asset. Teaching can be in French or in English, yet the recruited person is expected to be able to teach at least partly in French four years after hiring.

The annual salary is 25,000 - 40,000 Euros after taxes, depending on experience and qualification.

In view of this recruitment process, the Department of Economics organizes “Days at LEDa” on March 25 & 26, 2025. Candidates to the Assistant Professor positions are strongly encouraged to participate in these “Days at LEDa”.

During this event, the candidate will have the opportunity to present a job market paper in a plenary session, and to discuss with the members of the Department of Economics more informally during bilateral meetings. The event will be organized on site. On-line sessions can be organized for foreign candidates upon demand.

Instructions for application to the “Days at LEDa”

Candidates must have completed a Ph.D. in Economics by January 10th, 2025. Candidates holding a PhD from a French university must hold the “Qualification” at the time of hire.

Candidates can apply by sending their application including a full CV and their job market paper to recrutementmcf@dauphine.psl.eu, with a copy to vanina.youmbi@dauphine.psl.eu.

The application deadline to the “Days at LEDa” is February 17, 2025. Selected applicants will be notified by March 6, 2025.

More information about the LEDa

The LEDa, Laboratoire d'Economie de Dauphine, is a research unit created in 2009. It brings together all the economists of the Université Paris Dauphine-PSL, in collaboration with the French National Centre for Scientific Research (CNRS) and the Institut de la Recherche pour le Développement (IRD).

Its research develops covers a wide range of key societal issues: health and ageing, development and mobility, macroeconomic policy, the environment and climate, and finance. Applied contributions are complemented by theoretical reflections on microeconomic foundations, the economics of well-being, market structures and interactions, and the issue of risk.

LEDa has 142 members: 63 teaching researchers, 13 IRD and CNRS researchers and 60 doctoral students and an administrative team of 6 people.

Université Paris Dauphine-PSL is a leading research center in decision and organizational sciences. It is a founding member of PSL, a union of French academic institutions. The University Paris Dauphine-PSL is situated in central Paris.
